Jack and Annie are ready for another adventure in the Magic Tree House! This time, they travel back in time to the Great Plains of North America in 1856. Jack and Annie are excited to see buffalo, but they soon realize that the animals are in danger from hunters.

Jack and Annie meet a Lakota boy named Little Wolf. Little Wolf tells them about the importance of the buffalo to his people. The buffalo provide food, clothing, and shelter for the Lakota. Little Wolf is worried that the buffalo will be killed off by the hunters.

Jack and Annie decide to help Little Wolf and the buffalo. They travel to a nearby fort and talk to the soldiers there. The soldiers agree to help Jack and Annie protect the buffalo.

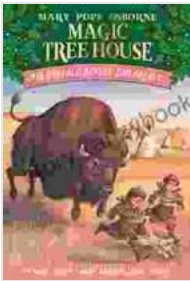

Jack and Annie, along with Little Wolf and the soldiers, set out to stop the hunters. They ride horses and shoot arrows at the hunters. The hunters are outnumbered and outgunned, and they soon give up.

Jack and Annie have saved the buffalo! They are happy to have helped Little Wolf and his people. Jack and Annie know that the buffalo are an important part of the Great Plains ecosystem. They are glad that they were able to protect the animals.
