Part I: Identity

This part of the book examines the complex and fluid nature of Muslim identities in Europe. The author explores how European Muslims negotiate their religious, cultural, and national identities, often facing pressure to conform to dominant societal norms or to choose between their Muslim faith and their European citizenship. The author also discusses the role of education, media, and social interactions in shaping Muslim identities.

Part II: Belonging

Part II focuses on the issue of belonging and the challenges that European Muslims face in feeling a sense of connection to their communities and societies. The author explores the experiences of discrimination, prejudice, and social exclusion that many Muslims encounter, as well as the strategies they employ to cope with these experiences. The book also examines the role of mosques and other Muslim institutions in fostering a sense of community and belonging.

Part III: Citizenship

The final part of the book examines the challenges and opportunities that European Muslims face in fulfilling their aspirations as citizens. The author explores the barriers they encounter in accessing education, employment, and political participation, as well as the efforts they make to overcome these obstacles. The book also discusses the role of government policies and public attitudes in shaping the civic experiences of European Muslims.

To Be European Muslim is a valuable resource for anyone interested in understanding the complex and evolving experiences of European Muslims. The book provides a nuanced and insightful analysis of the challenges and opportunities they face, and offers valuable recommendations for policymakers, educators, and community leaders working to promote inclusion and social cohesion.

Written in a clear and engaging style, To Be European Muslim is accessible to a wide range of readers. It is a must-read for anyone who wants to gain a deeper understanding of the experiences of European Muslims and the challenges they face in navigating their identities, building a sense of belonging, and fulfilling their aspirations as citizens.
